Govt., regulators must take blame for NPAs: SBI chief

The country has "abundant reserves to capitalise the banks with a swift response.....so China would not have a hard landing", says Arundhati Bhattacharya, Chairperson, SBI.

State Bank of India (SBI) Chairperson Arundhati Bhattacharya on Tuesday said that the blame for banks' non performing assets (NPAs) was not limited to them. All the stakeholders, including promoters, government, lenders and even the regulators are to blame, Ms Bhattacharya said.

"Promoters were bidding aggressively riding on the back of good times around 2007-08 and some of them were diverting funds out of the well-run units hoping the money flow would continue forever," Ms. Bhattacharya said. The banks, she said, extended loans for long duration, as much as 30 years, while hoping the funds would be recovered in 10 years or so. While the regulator is to blame for allowing such a dispensation, the government was to take the blame for policy uncertainty like cancellation of telecom licences, she said. Ms. Bhattacharya was delivering the ASSOCHAM Foundation Day Lecture here. She allayed concerns that the banks reeling under the stressed assets might be inadequate capitalisation and said that SBI and several other public sector banks were planning to divest non-core assets in order generate the funds required to meet the Basel III norms. Earlier, SBI had announced plans to lower its stake in insurance ventures—SBI Life Insurance and SBI General.

"One thing I would like you to be assured about is that there is a lot of thought going into it and the banks will be capitalised enough in order to have good capital to support the economy," she added.
